(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
LONDON, Dec. 29.—As a result of the conferences which have been in progress for several days, the Entente reply to the German note is now completed. It could go forward Friday or Saturday except for the necessary formality of transmitting it to all the Allies before final delivery. This means that the delivery will be made early in or in the middle of next week, perhaps on Wednesday.

The delivery will be made at Paris, after which the communication will be forwarded to Germany through American channels. The reply is a very long document, much more lengthy than the German note.

Unusual optimism is shown here as a result of the final form which the reply has taken which is believed to be such that it will meet with satisfaction at Washington.

The reply to the American note will follow in a few days after the delivery of the reply to Germany.

Lawson, of Boston, to come to Washington and substantiate his published statement that he knew of the so-called leak and his prediction that there would be another.

"Put up or shut up," said Chairman Henry's telegram. "Cease slandering and libeling Congress and public officials or make good your charges."

Mr. Henry announced that he would re-introduce his bill next Tuesday to regulate the New York stock exchange.

AMERICAN WOMAN REVIVES HOMERIC ART

In the old Homeric days the lyre and human voice portrayed the happenings of the day and age. Today the printed sheet does this, but cold type cannot supply the human touch needed to give a line strength, force and sympathy. The revival of this most human of all the dramatic arts is being sponsored by a gifted exponent, Miss Janet Mannheimer. Eleanor Gates, the author, calls her "first aid to playwrights" because she "interprets a drama, giving each scene its proper value and reading each line so well that both the beauty and underlying thought is clearly brought out."

NEW PROCESS
FOR MAKING
OF SUGAR NOWFrom "Final Molasses" is Announced by the Hawaiian Sugar Planters.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
HONOLULU, T. H., Dec. 29.—A new process for the manufacture of sugar from "final molasses" which was announced at the annual meeting of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association this month may, it is estimated, result in a saving of not less than $2,500,000 a year to the sugar men of the Hawaiian islands, and effect even greater saving in Cuba and other cane-growing countries.

The process was announced by J. N. S. Williams, of the island of Maui, who is the inventor. He has not patented his process and its use is, therefore, open to all sugar-growers. The planters' association went on record as recognizing Mr. Williams' discovery as the biggest achievement of the year in the sugar industry.

The process takes from the so-called "final molasses" approximately one-half of the eight per cent of sugar that has hitherto been considered a total loss. No process had been known by which this sugar could be crystallized and recovered.

In Mr. Williams' process the "first" molasses is boiled as usual, but instead of ceasing to boil it at the usual stage, the boiling is continued up to the point of practical exclusion of all water. The resulting product, while still hot, is run into containers, where it is allowed to cool and solidify for about a week, becoming as hard as rock. This material, which contains the crystallized sugar, is broken up, passed through a crushing process, mixed with water until it becomes once more a molasses-like texture, and finally run through a specially constructed centrifugal. This makes about 2,000 revolutions per minute, and it successfully extracts the sugar that formerly was lost.
